JURY	21	WELCOME PARTY	48	TV FILM FESTIVAL	116

TV series are developing in many different forms around the globe, and the audience's viewing habits are rapidly changing. In an era of flooding contents and platforms, the Seoul International Drama Awards is now serving as a bridge to introduce authentic stories to the world.

This year, 270 entries from 61 countries competed, and about 80 award-winning staff from 18 countries attended the event. Both Korean and international guests who attended the networking event expressed their satisfaction.

We have cooperated with several organizations to expand the screening opportunities for the people who wanted to watch the entries. For the very first time we collaborated with Cinematheque KOFA, and co-hosted the TV Film Festival for two weeks which included screening and meet and greet events. We unveiled twenty-eight entries through various venues, including a short-form series outdoor screening in the Hangang Park, co-hosted screenings with a university, an embassy, and a multi-cultural center, and provided a VOD service through mobile and IPTV.

We live in an age where audio-visual media including TV and film are being newly defined. People are taking more keen interest in content and market in other cultures, and are paying more attention to international drama awards and festivals held in Asia than 14 years ago, when the Seoul International Drama Awards took its first step.

As a bridge between Asian and international markets, the Seoul International Drama Awards has become a place of networking where creators, producers, and experts learn from each other and build collaborative relationships.

I am delighted to introduce the people and programs that marked the Seoul International Drama Awards 2019 through this photo book. I am deeply grateful to all those who have supported us.

Marking the 15th anniversary, next year we will hold the event in conjunction with BCWW (Broadcast Worldwide—including contents market, forum, etc.) on a bigger scale.

Thank you for your support and encouragement.

Jeong Hoon Park
Chairman, Seoul Drama Awards Organizing Committee
