Taehwan's claim that he did not sit behind the wheel has been ignored, and with all the evidence pointing out that he caused an accident from drunk driving, a mysterious person named Prosecutor Cha appears and makes a proposal to drop the accident-related charges if he participates in a virtual reality program being developed by the Ministry of Justice. Taehwan must enter virtual reality that reconstructs an actual case, play the role of a father of a child, and find out the truth of the case where his son dies.

Juries' Comment

"The story is extraordinarily relevant, and the composition of its narrative elements and the directing—especially the skillfully edited repetition scenes—are remarkable. The main actor performs a rather difficult role perfectly, and the rest of the cast is also excellent."

"With remarkable coherence between theme, direction, cinematography, and editing, it successfully balances three parallel narratives: a top actor's troubled reality, his immersive VR experience as a grieving father, and the real-life case the VR is based on."

Title Our Beautiful Summer

Entrant Company CJ ENM / South Korea

Summary

“The birth of the quadruplets was newsworthy from the very beginning.” In an era of low birthrates, the arrival of Areum, Daun, Uri, and Nara—the quadruplets—was a blessing to the world, a source of fascination, and a headline-maker. Among them, Nara, the only daughter, shared an especially close bond with their mother. They were the kind of mother and daughter who shared everything, no matter how trivial. Then, one day, Nara suddenly took her own life. She left no note, her death abrupt and without explanation. No one knew why, and no clues could be found. Her family, longing to ask her even in dreams, never saw her there either. Wounded in their own ways, the family of quadruplets avoided speaking of Nara altogether. It wasn't until a girl named Yeoreum, wearing a yellow cardigan much like Nara's, moved in next door that the family slowly began to open up about her. How angry they were at her for leaving. How deeply hurt they were. How much they missed her. And how much they had loved her all along.

Title Smetana

Entrant Company Czech Television / Czech Republic

Summary

Bedřich Smetana stands at the very foundations of Czech music. He considered himself its founder, and his entire life's effort was directed toward bringing Czech music into the world stage—or at least into the European context. He devoted his whole life to this goal, and despite truly tragic misfortunes, he was successful. This film follows approximately a fifteen-year period from 1868, when the decision was made to lay the foundation stone of the National Theatre, to 1883, when the theatre was ceremonially reopened after a fire with the opera Libuše. It ends about half a year before Smetana's death.

Title Unbalanced Love

Entrant Company CJ ENM / South Korea

Summary

27-year-old Youngsun has lived her whole life with severely uneven breasts—one A-cup and the other a D-cup. Her deep insecurity began in high school during a dance sports competition. While passionately dancing the samba, her bra padding flew out and tripped another contestant. Humiliated, she ran off stage, clutching her chest. Since then, her asymmetry has caused daily discomfort—bra straps slipping, clothes fitting oddly—and a growing belief that her body is a mistake that must be fixed. She visits a plastic surgeon, but his question stuns her: “Your left is an A-cup, your right is a D-cup. Which one do you want to match?” Both sides have their own charm, and she can't decide. Having abandoned her dream of becoming a dancer and struggling with relationships—allowing partners to touch only one side—Youngsun feels like her youth is slipping away. Then one day, while delivering green juice, she trips in front of a lingerie store and injures her tailbone. The doctor who treats her is Lee Min, a former high school classmate and possibly her first love. With his kind words—“You've always been amazing”—her heart begins to flutter again. Maybe, just maybe, this encounter will help Youngsun embrace her unique body and step into a more confident, balanced life.

Based on the New York Times bestselling novel of the same name, <Pachinko> tells a sweeping and deeply moving story of love and survival across four generations, told in three languages — Korean, Japanese and English. When the first season's story concluded, the year was 1936. Seven years have passed since we last saw our indomitable characters. The year is now 1945 and World War II rages across the countryside. Sunja, our devoted mother and fierce defender of her family, has no choice but to turn to dangerous elements in order to ensure the family's survival. In our Present Day story, Solomon is also pushed to the edge and forced to take a stand, much to his grandmother's disappointment. In our Past, Sunja and the children are forced to flee a bomb-threatened Osaka only to find that where they've run to may not be any better. The family settles on the rice farm and new relationships blossom.

Juries' Comment

"Great series, intricate yet intimated with emotional depth. Captivating, great acting, in particular Minha Kim is great. While telling the story about a multi-generational Korean family that is struggling with the consequences of Japanese occupation and World War II, the series manages to portray Korean history and culture perfectly for people who are not familiar with Korean culture."

"<Pachinko S2> is ambitious storytelling with fidelity to its thematic vision, giving viewers a deeply emotional and artfully crafted exploration of love, identity, and generational struggle. Visually, the series is stunning—cinematography, costume design, and direction work in unison to reflect both the devastation of war-torn 1940s Japan and the polished, high-stakes world of 1980s corporate ambition."

The third brother, Heungsoo, who used to be a famous choreographer, is eking out a living as a Zumba instructor at the local community center. The fourth brother, Beomsoo, is a single dad. The youngest, Kangsoo, an elite special forces operative, is facing a medical discharge after an injury. With no time to wallow in grief and armed with preposterous grit, Ma Gwangsook sets out on a daunting mission to look after her ragtag brothers-in-law and rebuild the brewery. Meanwhile, the infamously difficult and fussy president of LX Hotel, Dongseok, accidentally steps on Gwangsook's wedding gown. Unaware that Dongseok is a business magnate, Gwangsook confronts him, demanding payment for the repair of her gown. Dongseok, for his part, gets the wrong idea that Gwangsook is rude. But after drinking the rice wine Gwangsook made, Dongseok comes to understand her sincerity and dedication and finds himself drawn to her positive and steadfast character.

Entrant Company ERT S.A. HELLENIC BROADCASTING CORPORATION / Greece

Summary

The drama series <The Beach>, written by Panagiotis Iosifelis and directed by Stefanos Blatsos, captivates the audience with its plot twists, intrigue and powerful stories. <The Beach S2>, is an ode to Crete, to the beauty of nature and to the power of forbidden love. Crete in 1975: a time when Greece is struggling with a new and fragile democracy. The quaint village under the Matala rocks and the beloved Beach, with its caves over the water, are once again the place where old and new characters try to live, love and build a future, in a world that is rapidly changing. Secrets, love and revenge... a dark secret, a remnant of the brutal German Occupation during WWII, resurfaces and haunts the villagers and the small community still holding on to their hippy paradise. Pavlos (Dimitris Kitsos) comes back to his ancestral land and falls in love with Ifigenia, (Aphrodite Liantou) - a match that breaks every rule and is bound to come against family vendettas, war trauma, sinister ambitions and even murder. Juries' Comment

"The actor Jihood Ju delivers a striking performance, fully embodying the character of Baek Kanghyuk, while the rest of the cast brings depth and charm to their roles, greatly enhancing the show's overall immersion. With its well-structured storytelling and the character Yang Jaewon's growth through his encounters with Baek Kanghyuk, the series effectively conveys the real-world importance of trauma centers and resonates deeply with viewers."

"Rarely seen in medical dramas, action sequences such as rappelling and motorcycle set pieces serve as engaging highlights that add excitement to the narrative. Each character's distinct personality and appeal shine through, naturally leaving audiences eager for a second season."

When Life Gives You Tangerines

Entrant Company

Netflix / South Korea

Summary

In 1960s Jeju, there was Aesun, the daughter of a haenyeo (female diver), and Gwansik, the son of a fish seller.

Aesun, though soft as silken tofu on the inside, tried her best to appear indifferent and reserved. Gwansik, gentle on the outside, was iron-willed within. It was Gwansik who nurtured Aesun, both in body and heart. For ten years, he secretly took fish from his own home to feed her. When the literary girl Aesun, too proud to say even a single 'Cabbages are sweet...' while selling them in her school uniform, struggled, it was Gwansik who protected her pride.

Living as a weary lodger, always the one to take the school's free milk, Aesun was able to grow up as the town's most sharp and aloof girl, all thanks to Gwansik. In a time when hunger took many forms, they nurtured each other's hearts as their first love. But fate, as unfair as it can be, deals even the most beautiful connections with the same misfortunes of first love.

From 1960s Jeju to 2025 Seoul. "May their unbroken 70-year journey reach the same sky, bound by the same heart." To all who have walked this tangerine-twisted journey, you've made it beautifully. Welcome to <When Life Gives You Tangerines>

"Set against the backdrop of Jeju Island, the series follows people worn down by life as they pause, truly look at one another, and slowly begin to heal and grow. The camera captures the inner lives of the two leads with clarity and restraint, allowing the actors to express emotions that extend beyond a simple romance."

"Jeju's landscapes serve not only as a scenic setting but as a meaningful space where the characters face their feelings and begin to recover. With a pace that follows the quiet rhythm of nature, the drama gives viewers a welcome sense of calm and emotional breathing room amid the demands of daily life."
